January groups are off to a great start. Topics for discussion have been:

College persistence, what is it? What are the stats? Why do some students get to college and stay in college and others don't? How does having a college degree affect your life in Boston? How much does it cost to live in Boston? What are the lifetime earnings of someone with a college degree compared with someone without a college degree? How much do people earn in the trades? We will be inviting two visitors to group—a computer engineer and a carpenter—to discuss their career and education journeys.

RESPECT: how do you model it day by day in and out of the classroom? How can you remain respectful in a situation you don't quite understand? How do you remain respectful in a situation you don't control? Why do you think respect is "owed?"

BPD Officer Michael Long, pictured on far right above, will be sharing his life story with our young men and discussing law enforcement in Boston.
